Curriculum Overview

The online MS in Management and Leadership curriculum empowers students to influence meaningful change across large-scale companies, not-for-profit institutions, and cutting-edge start-ups.

The 36-unit curriculum is designed to help students manage change at all levels of your organization. They will build essential expertise in areas such as self-awareness, group dynamics, project management, organization and work design, and team and organizational culture.

Real-World Skills for Them, ROI for You

Our courses challenge students to think critically about business and innovative solutions that drive organizational change. This skill set—as well as the online degree format—benefits your company by allowing your employee to:

- Continue working full time for you while earning their degree.
- Apply what they learn in class to their role in real time.
- Promote new, innovative solutions to old business problems.
- Feel valued, incentivizing them to stay with your company longer.

We pride ourselves on providing a top-tier graduate school experience—led by industry-leading faculty, staff deeply committed to student success, and a forward-thinking business curriculum.”

Dean Deryck J. van Rensburg

Flexible Online Format

The online MS in Management and Leadership program is delivered in an engaging online learning environment that allows students to earn a degree from Pepperdine while managing their professional and personal commitments.

- Live, weekly classes that take place after regular business hours
- 24/7 mobile access to course work that features real business case studies
- Two on-campus immersions—most of which occur over a weekend

Weekend Immersions

During their time in the program, students join us on campus for two immersions in Los Angeles, California. The immersions engage them in practical training and exercises that enhance their presentation skills and fine-tune their ability to lead in teams.
